Conservation Meeting With Lawmakers Aug. 24-27

Lansing — A four-day meeting between members of the House Ways and Means Committee and officials of the Conservation Department will be held later this month to give the lawmakers a first-hand look at Michigan's conservation programs and needs.

The meeting, scheduled for Aug. 24-27, will open at the Higgins Lake conservation school and then shift to the Department's Haven Hill Lodge near Pontiac to acquaint the committee's members with conservation facilities and operations in both the northern and southern parts of the state.

Guided field trips have been laid out which take legislators to such points of interest as state parks and forest campgrounds, pipe rearing and waterfowl management projects, Department field offices, and state wildlife areas.

Touring parties will also visit the Department's unique forest fire experiment station near Roscommon, its state fish hatchery at Grayling, and southern Michigan forest nursery at Brighton. Dredging, filling, and pollution problems on inland and Great Lakes waters will be spotlighted as part of the look-see excursions.

This coming Monday, August 23, the Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit Grayling at the American Legion Hall from 12 noon until 6:00 p. m.

The past couple of weeks many people have been working to recruit blood donors. It is impossible to contact every potential blood donor in the county. If you have not been contacted please don't feel slighted, because herewith is an invitation for anyone between the ages of 18 through 59 to come in and make that important donation.

THE RED CROSS Blood Program, in which Crawford County participates, provides blood at no charge for county residents at Mercy Hospital or any other hospital in the United States or Canada in which county residents may be a patient. The success of the program is determined by the volunteer response of the people in each of the participating counties.

Along with the privilege of participating in the Blood Program goes the responsibility of making your self a blood donor. That makes you a mighty important person.

Anyone desiring information about the blood program or wishing to make an appointment to donate blood please call Derek McEvers, 348-4471 or the Rev. Charles McMahon, 348-4306.

P. S. The local chapter has just received word that blood supplies in general and negative type blood in particular are in short supply and consequently are counting on us to do our share.

The best of two-man canoe racing teams from the U. S. and Canada will gather at Grayling Friday, Aug. 20th, prior to the 12:01 a. m. start of the World's Championship AuSable River Canoe Marathon — Grayling to Oscoda — Aug. 21st.

Checking and rechecking of special gear for the 16-hour endurance run will be the scene at the Grayling staging area as race officials make sure all canoes pass rigid tests as to height, length, width and beam measurements.

Plans are being finalized, with the cooperation of the Consumers Power Company to illuminate the entire staging area at the starting line and race officials state there will be ample free spectator space for those viewing the action.

The community of Grayling is planning special events in conjunction with race festivities which include the appearance of Grayling's Miss Michigan Winter Sports Queen, Lauri Olson. She will drop the flag signaling the start of the Northland Classic.

Communities along the race route are also planning special activities in connection with the race and the awarding of more than $3000.00 in prize money at the Oscoda finish line.

Most of the teams entered in the event have participated in many warm-up races. However, the grueling pace set in the AuSable run will be a real test of stamina as the precision rhythmic paddlers try to equal or better the record time of Minnesota's Irvin Peterson and Oscoda's Ralph Sawyer who last year completed the course in a little over 15 hours.

MANY RECALL how they lose the advantage of swift currents as they presciently paddle their way in long stretches of "still water" above the six dams to be portaged before coming into the home stretch at Oscoda. A missed calculation of signals from the stern man can mean disaster when beheading for a portage dash, avoiding rocks, deadheads and other ever present hazards known only too well to the experienced canoeist.

Developing of pulled muscles and agonizing cramps are only a few of the things which run through the minds of contestants as they line up for the starting gun. It's the challenge of the Famed AuSable and the accomplishment of even finish this race that wipes these fears from the minds of the racers as the starting gun booms and the first powerful dip of their paddles send them on their way.

RACE OFFICIALS point out that the best vantage points for fans to view the action will be where several bridges cross the AuSable between Grayling and Oscoda; also, the six dam sites, the first of which is at Mio, where teams will make their first portage in the early morning daylight hours.

Another noticeable factor about the 1965 summer camp is the fact that nearly all of the Ohio National Guard Division's 9,000 members and 535 attached Army Reservists are spending the entire two weeks in bivouac training areas in the far reaches of this sprawling base.

The world situation also has added a determination and extra sense of seriousness to this year's training. That determination also has another goal in mind — trying to prove the Pentagon was wrong in its recently-killed proposal to downgrade the Buckeye Division.

The 37th was to have been downgraded to a brigade — about one-third division size — and placed in the New York National Guard Division under the plan to merge the Guard and the Army Reserve.

The merger plan was killed, at least for this year, by a Congressional subcommittee just last week, a few days before the Ohioans pulled out for what many thought was to have been the Division's last summer camp. The reprieve assures the division will be in existence at least until next year.

As in the past five years the Ohioans have trained at Camp Grayling, they move here entirely in military convoy. It is a part of the realism Division leaders are trying to instill in the training. Cars driven here by the attached reservists were impounded for the camp period upon arrival.

Although the training area is old and familiar to the 37th, many of its leaders, including the commander, are new. Brig. Gen. Wilbur H. Eriksen assumed command of the Buckeye Division June 1 from Maj. Gen. Loren G. Windom, who had been commander since 1959. Gen. Windom retired.

A HIGHLIGHT of the camp period again this year will be the appearance of Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes at the annual Governor's Review which will close out the first week of training Saturday morning, Aug. 21 at 10 a. m. The Governor has been present to review the 37th — Ohio's largest reserve or guard unit — for all three years he has been in office. For some of the troops, the review will be the only time during the two weeks they will be in the main camp area.

Several other teams have entered since the drawings for positions were held last weekend in Oscoda. Late entries will start in order of receipt of their entry.

High Market Rating for County

(Special to the Avalanche)

NEW YORK — Crawford County, on the strength of its business activity during the past year, is given a high rating in Sales Management's new survey of buying power.

The figures show that it was an above-average market in the year. Local residents earned more and spent more, per person, than people in most other sections of the country.

The copyrighted survey presents similar data for every county in the United States.

In Crawford County, the huge outpouring of consumer dollars produced a sales volume in local retail stores of over $9,476,000.

it was a much greater amount than should have been expected. With .0028 percent of the national population residing in the local area, that proportion of the nation's business would have been its natural quota.

It went above that amount however, reaching .0036 percent of the national total.

Consumer buying was in high gear across the board. As a result, new records were posted by most stores. Among the leaders were those selling apparel and other types of soft goods and those selling cars, refrigerators and other durables.

The retail market was sparked, to a large extent, by a soaring demand for furniture, household goods and appliances, the survey shows. Much of it was due to an acceleration in the marriage rate and in the number of new household formations.

Nationally, in tune with this activity, some 1.5 million new jobs were created. There were still about 3.5 million people unemployed, however, at year end.

From an income standpoint, 1964 was a better year than 1963 for most families.

The net earnings of the Crawford County residents, after payment of their taxes, came to $8,645,000, a gain over the previous year's $8,128,000.

It amounted to $3,763 per household, an arithmetical average obtained by dividing income by number of households.

The fact that more money was spent in retail stores than was earned locally, shows that people from other areas come into the county to shop.

The relative standing of one community to another, in terms of purchasing power and business vitality, is shown through an "index of sales activity."

Crawford County is given an index rating of 129, or 29 percent better than the national average.

Which View Will Prevail . . .

Sometimes it seems that the government's left hand doesn't know what its right hand is doing. Here's an example: Esther Peterson, the President's Advisor on Consumer Affairs, recently issued a report on consumer education for low income groups. In the course of it, she said the poor pay more for what they buy, one reason being that "There is a lack of supermarkets, chain outlets and other bargain stores in low income neighborhoods." At a news conference, she emphasized her interest in this and said that she is consulting with operators of these stores and hopes that they will find it possible to open more outlets in the neighborhoods involved. Mrs. Peterson finds modern mass merchandising good.

At the same time, other elements within the government are seemingly worried over chain mergers — mergers which are designed to still further advance economy and efficiency in merchandising. As qualified observers see it, the "antitrusters" are trying to rationalize modern mass merchandising on the basis of a Sherman Act philosophy rooted in an era which has gone forever.

The question, of course, is which view will prevail? "Bigness" is an absolute essential if prices are to be held to a minimum in this age of inflation. Mrs. Peterson, it seems, understands that and is acting accordingly. In this, her position is squarely in the interest of all consumers — and most particularly consumers of small means.

Poor Bargain . . .

Dr. Clare E. Griffin, who is Professor Emeritus of the School of Business Administration at the University of Michigan has published a book called "The Free Society". In a searching discussion of governmental regulation he says this: "The regulated first tolerate and then embrace the limitations of their own freedom. Who then is left to resist the trend? Not the consumers, for the only protection they know is the regulating commission. Not the companies, for regulation does for them what the Sherman Act would prohibit if attempted by themselves."

In other words, people representing all the facets of our complex society accept regulation because it seems to serve a material self-interest. That this alleged benefit may be fleeting or illusory is not recognized. And, in the lust for material gain, freedom is sacrificed.

This is how regulation can become an accepted way of life in a nation. And this is the way liberty can be destroyed.

AUGUST 20, 1942

Last Monday officials of Grayling Winter Sports, Inc., made a trip over part of the Winter Sports park ski trails. In the party were President C. J. McNamara, vice-president Clarence Johnson, sec'y-treas. A. J. Joseph and Harold MacNeven. They started out in the morning on horses from near the bridge leading over the toboggan slides. They selected the red trail No. 1. This is 1 1/4 miles in length and required 5 1/2 hours for skiing. Of course horses are much slower. This trail circles west of Lake Margrethe and leads north and east, to and over the famous "Three Sisters" hills, down through Pleasant Valley, Cote Dame Marie, Target Cross and various named side runs. Those in the party say it was a fascinating and thrilling trip. At noon Alec Atkinson met the party near the National Guard artillery range with a huge basket of lunch.

Twelve members of the West Branch Country Club journeyed to Grayling Sunday afternoon for their return golf match with our golf club. This time Grayling won by a score of 27 1/2 to 8 1/2. The games were played individual match play, there being three points to be divided between each pair of opponents.

Attorney General Is Michigan's Chief Law Enforcement Officer

NEW POWERS

Michigan's 1963 Constitution maintained the attorney general as a part of the elected executive branch of government but says nothing of substance regarding his responsibilities.

As chief law enforcement officer of the state, all his duties are prescribed by statute.

First, the attorney general is legal counsel for the Legislature and every state officer, department and commission. He is required to assist in the conduct of all official hearings held by the various units of state government. In addition, this office gives him the power to intervene in any lawsuit in which he believes the interests of the people of the state are involved.

Power is given the attorney general to advise the prosecuting attorneys throughout the state and he may exercise supervisory powers over them. He has some inquisitorial powers and he may request the call for grand jury proceedings to investigate crime, election frauds and complaints for removal of public officials.

To fulfill these many powers and responsibilities, the attorney general maintains a good sized staff of licensed attorneys, many of whom are specialists in a particular field of law.

Some assistant attorneys-general are assigned to specific state departments and commissions while others work on a broader scope within one of several divisions within the attorney general's offices in Detroit or Lansing.

Ultimately, however, the state legal officer is responsible for all work done by his staff. Thus all of the legal work performed is approved by him before it leaves the office for its destination, whether it be a formal opinion, official state document or court proceeding.

By virtue of his office, the attorney general himself is a member of the State Administrative Board, Municipal Finance Commission and State Employees' Re-irement, Judges' Retirement and Corporation Tax Appeal Boards.

CREeping CHANGES

Thousands of Michigan residents are affected by changes made almost daily in state government regulations, but barely noticed. Many go unheeded because they are one small part of a major project and only the main work is deemed important enough to spread the word about.

In the important field of civil rights nearly every state agency has had some involvement, although generally only executive pronouncement or directives have gained note.

Michigan's education system has been involved most notably in the area of school integration.

Teacher assignments have played a part as have the tools of education. Civil rights leaders' influence on the latter has been heavily felt though the impact has been a subtle one.

More than two years ago the state department of public instruction announced as an almost accidental activity the adoption of a formal policy on the treatment of minority groups in textbooks.

Designed as a guide to school book publishers dealing with the state, the statement was billed as a tool giving Michigan a national leadership role "in securing a more accurate treatment of minority groups in school books."

It was developed by a group called the Committee for Better Human Relations of the Michigan Curriculum Program, a voluntary group of educators. Before adoption, the policy was reviewed by officials of the American Textbook Publishers Institute.

Education leaders in the state said it was unfortunate that textbooks generally stereotyped American families as upper-middle class, blue-eyed and blond rather than giving full recognition to the greatness of the U. S. because of its differences in people.

No other state had adopted any formal policy in this area up to the Michigan action, the Publisher's Institute representative said. Basically this policy statement was aimed at the textbook suppliers. The direct effect, however, can now be seen in the school books used in the elementary and secondary schools in Michigan.

Major points suggested a greater use of illustrative materials depicting minority group members taking part in the normal activities of American life. An inclusion of human relations content in all subject matter areas at all grade levels was recommended.

Full effect of this policy will not be seen for some years but chances are parents could see a part of it in the newest textbooks children used this past school year.

QUANDARY

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor in each for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
